Fashion changes all the time, but not always at the same speed. Some things are in fashion for a very short time. Others, on the contrary, are in fashion for years. People who make goods want the fashion to change as quickly as possible. For example, a factory has made dark blue jeans. If these jeans are in fashion next year, you may not wish to buy another pair. But if black jeans become popular, you will want to buy a pair of black jeans even if you already have a good pair of jeans which are simply of a different colour.
